

Only-Woman's-PAGE

A CLASS IN DRESSMAKING AT THE PASCAL INSTITUTE.

WHERE TO GO-TODAY.

Meeting of the Daughters of Lafayette Post at the home of Mrs. Alice Johnson, No. 107 West Sixty-fourth-st.

Bal of the Women's Protective Association of Brooklyn in Women's Hall Fulton-st., Brooklyn, at 10 A.M. to discuss the supply of water.

Lecture to Thomas W. Stevens on "Schumann, the Great Romanticist," in Association Hall, Brooklyn, $1.50 p.m.

Lecture by Professor Irving W. Fay on "The Chemistry of Colors and its Compounds," in Polytechnic Hall, Long-street, rear Courtland, Brooklyn, $1.50 p.m.

Lecture by Smith Higginbotham on "The Flora of Long Island" in the Art Building, Brooklyn, $1.50 p.m.

Exhibition of photographic prints, No. 200 Madison-avenue, $1.50 p.m.

Meeting to Mrs. Kinn at the home of Mrs. Catherine E. Redding, No. 214 Fifth-avenue, 8 p.m.

Harvest Home Festival by the Women's Auxiliary of the Prospect Park Young Men's Christian Association in the new gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. Building, in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, evening.

Cats in Sociology under Miss Matael Hunt in the Art Building, Brooklyn, 4.15 p.m.

GOSSIP AT THE CLUBS.

THE PHILITSCIPOMA SPENDS A SOCIAL AFTERNOON.

WOMAN'S FEDERATION FURTHERING THE IDEA OF A STATE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL—DATE FIXED FOR PROFESSIONAL WOMEN'S LEAGUE FAIR.

The Philitscipoma Club of Newark held its monthly social yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Harry Wallerstein, No. 27 West Sixteenth-st., Manhattan.

Mrs. Wallerstein received her guests in a pretty gown of white organza and lace over blue silk. Her sister, Miss Julian Dean, who wore a pale blue silk gown with a cashmere shawl, assisted Mrs. Wallerstein in receiving. The room was beautifully decorated with branches of mountain laurel and masses of pink flowers, the laurel being the club color and the pink the club color.

In the drawing room were a screen of laurel and a profusion of pink carnations and white chrysanthemums. The large mirror was framed with a number of rays and patriotic emblems. The hall and dining room were effectively trimmed with laurel and flowers and the tables were lighted with pink candles in silver candelabra.

Although it was a social occasion there was a programme of songs and a debate on the question "Is there a place for the Nineteenth Century Phillips?" between Misses Holmes and Mrs. Mullin, and the debate was carried on by Misses Holmes and Mrs. Mullin and an original poem by Miss Holmes. The audience was composed of about one hundred and seventy-five persons. The meetings are held fortnightly.

The Elizabeth Lady Stanton Political League of Brooklyn was formed last spring with a membership of six. It has only one meeting during the spring and summer and opened again this season with an enrollment of twenty active and twenty-five associate members.

Among those present were the Rev. Antonette Brown, the local president of the Miss America Protective Society; Mr. Thomas J. Sweeny, Mrs. Lillian Sanderson Smith, of the Daughters of Mrs. Ronald McLean, regent of New York City Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution; Mrs. Seward, Mrs. James E. Moore, Mrs. George J. Walker, Dr. Eliza Miller, Mrs. John E. Eugene Porter, Mrs. Eldridge Morris, Miss Moore and Mrs. Mary Newton, of Staten. An elaborate tea was served.

MORE WOMEN PROTEST.

A public mass meeting was held in Philadelphia on Tuesday, under the auspices of the Women's Presbyterian Home Mission Society, to join the protest against Congressman-elect Roberts. The principal speaker was the Rev. Dr. L. R. Foote, pastor of the Thirteenth Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn.

In a spirited address Dr. Foote declared that all the authoritative sources of information for years had assured inquirers that polygamy still exists in Utah, and that the practice is increasing as the Mormons see fit. He said that the Mormon leaders are determined that polygamy shall not die in Utah, and that the present campaign was directed against the Mormons. The present campaign is not directed against an individual or a system. It is directed with a particular earnest appeal to every voter to write his representative in Congress and Senator and state his opinion on the matter.

At the last meeting of the Westchester Woman's Club it was resolved by unanimous vote that a petition be drawn up and forwarded to Washington, requesting the admission of Brigham H. Roberts to the House of Representatives.

The talk on "Nurses Smoking" as reported in The Tribune of October 11, were not at an official meeting of the course, as some of the readers have understood it, but were the private opinions of different nurses mentioned. So far as The Tribune course has not yet seen a club discussion on the subject of women smoking, but

Miss Florence Howe, Hall, read a paper on "Progress of Women in the Nineteenth Century," at a meeting of the Vermont State Federation of Women's Literary Clubs, which opened at Lyndonville yesterday.

WOMAN'S SCHOOL COMMISSIONER.

The women teachers of Nassau County, N. Y., are expressing a great deal of pleasure at the nomination of Miss Anna Hicks, of Lakeville, as School Commissioner. She was chosen by the trustees at the convention held in Mineola on Wednesday.

Miss Hicks has been a teacher for twenty years, and is principal of the Lakeville Public School. Her Republican opponent is Dr. James Cooley, of Glen Cove.

MISS EMMA THURSBY TO RETURN.

Miss Emma Thurbsy, who with her sister, Miss Ida L. Thurbsy, has been spending the summer in Europe, was expected to sail yesterday on the Alter, which is due in New-York October 21. In a letter announcing their return Miss Thurbsy reports the most enjoyable summer. They attended the International Congress of Women Teachers from London to Paris and to London in the Pyrenees Mountains, while Miss Thurbsy took the cure at Marseilles. Miss Irene, Miss Brevia, and other artists were there at the same time. Most of the remaining time was spent in Venice, Rome and other Italian cities.

BUILT A CENTURY AGO.

HOME OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

WHERE MRS. STEVENS ATTENDS TO HER VAST CORRESPONDENCE—SURROUNDED BY FLOWERS AND SUNSHINE.

Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens, National president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, was unanimously re-elected State president of Maine at the convention held in Portland recently. This makes the twenty-third time that she has been chosen to lead the White Ribbons of the Pine Tree State, and in all these years only one vote has been cast against her.

A charming pen picture of Mrs. Stevens's home at Straubwater, Me., is given by Miss Elizabeth Gordon, sister of Miss Willard's secretary.

The large substantial house was built a century ago, and four country roads, with grass green edges, wind along and meet just in front of the splendid stately elms which stand like sentinels in front of the house. Large fireplaces in every room and numerous windows give cheer and sunshine. From the upstairs rooms one gets delightful views of the surrounding country, the pretty homes, farms and rivers, broad meadows, sweet odors and hues of insects making one sick with a sense of sweet content that only the real country can give. Yet within sight of the house are the trolley car and the telegraph and telephone offices which connect the town with the outside world. The woman's Christian Temperance Union headquarters are in the next door to Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure-seekers, but partially hidden from them by the trees is the den of Mrs. Oliver Hanson, Mrs. Stevens's close friend. Miss Willard, Mrs. Stevens's personal secretary, is surrounded by souvenirs, pictures and news of friends. Mrs. Stevens attends to her national correspondence.

"At the foot of the garden in the rear of the house a river runs meandering by, and the quiet is often disturbed by the voices of many who are paddling their canoes. Within sound of these pleasure